Hemocian Museum

1973 was the year that a tent was set up in the yard to display memorabilia from past barbecues.

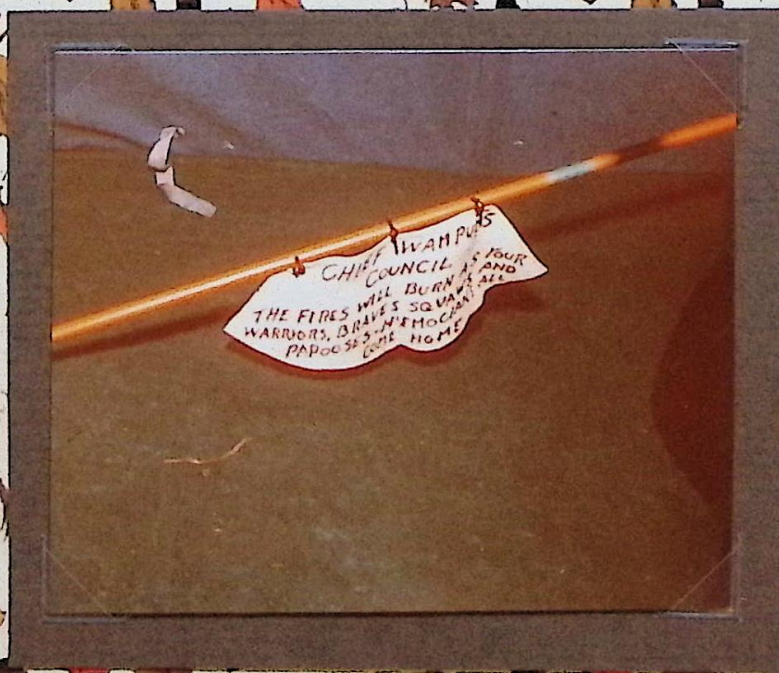

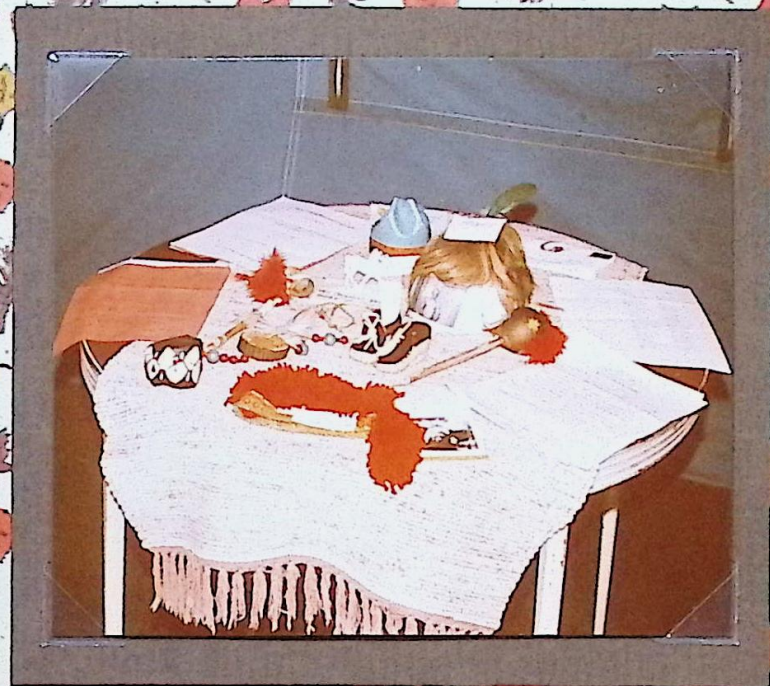

Uncle Bill always sent smoke signals each year announcing the date and they always contained something Indian in nature. Many were displayed in the "Museum".

Bill's cider was always a big hit at the barbecue. The crock jug was a fixture. It always sat underneath the big oak tree in Granny's yard.

The Hemocian Pow Wows were held for more than thirty years at the home of Floyd and Jessie Wiley which was the farm homesteaded by Thomas Wiley in the 1870's. The farm was sold in 1986 after Jessie passed away. These books are dedicated to her.
